

SUNDAY LEAVE PASS 2009

Centenary Park Results May

This months results can be viewed on
<http://sundayleavepass.com/>

This month there were no torrential down pours, since all of the rain clouds have spent the last few weeks up at South East Queensland, and therefore everybody who teed off actually made it through to the finishing hole even if a little battle weary, disheveled and worn out from tackling the windy conditions. As always Centenary Park lived up to it's reputation as one of the toughest courses on the season's fixture, and the high scores reflected it.

Previously the long par 5 first hole has shattered the confidence of many a player and destroyed their round before it had even begun. Greg Parsons does not have fond memories of the 1st hole. On his last two outings at Centenary Park he has, on both occasions, failed to make it past the ladies tee, had had at least a couple of air swings and he averages just a little over 11 strokes on the opening hole. It was little wonder that he was the last person to drag himself down to the tee. In fact Greg was lucky to start at all, apparently he almost had a nervous break down as he pulled into the car park at 945am. As soon as he remembered the challenge he was about to take on, he suddenly turned as white as a ghost, started convulsing and began to shake uncontrollably. In the end he curled himself into the foetal position on the passenger seat of the car and cried. It was Fil who arrived at the golf course about 1030am who while looking for loose change in all of the cars in the car park discovered Greg in the terrible state that he was in. Somehow Fil managed to encourage Greg to face his demons and they arrived just in time to hit off in the last group. To his credit Greg pulled himself together, successfully drove past the ladies tee- (congratulations) and then went on to post the second best score for the day.

As it happens the 1st hole still claimed it's fair share of victims. Adam Cooper shot a 12, and Rick, Fil and Runar only just managed to roll their putts in to avoid double figures. Stu Coops buried himself in the drain with his third shot. Rather than do the sensible thing and take a penalty drop, he instead played his half submerged ball out of the water completely saturating his trousers and shirt with water and mud. For the rest of the round he looked as if he'd been the referee of a mud wrestling carnival, mind you his golf was as dirty as his clothes were.

Stu wasn't the only one who needed a good wash after the round. Runar had to dust himself down after taking four shots to get out of the bunker on the 18th hole. Alistair and Cam looked on in disbelief as they witnessed Runar attempt to set a new Guinness Book Record for the most sand shifted out of a bunker in a single sitting. Runar managed to displace 1.2 cubic meters of sand while he tried to get out of the bunker, and incredibly 0.8 cubic meters of that was with his back swing. Somehow he actually scoops sand up during his back swing, which he then manages to tip over his head, before hitting through the ball and scooping up sand on the follow through which he then sprays up into his face. The boys found it very humorous to watch.

The laughter was very short lived for the newcomer Cam who, although he may not have broken a record came close to breaking a few things of his own. A wayward shot on 4th hole cut through trees, flew over the boundary fence and bounced on the road between two cars. His playing group looked on in horror as they waited for the sound of broken glass or the screech of brakes or a collision. Luckily there wasn't any but it was close nonetheless.

It is worth reminding you all again that it is recommended that you consider taking out golfers insurance to cover yourself against things like that occurring. Your green fees do not cover you for public liability and unfortunately people can be sued for damage caused to others while you are playing golf. Insurance is not compulsory but there is a policy available for social golfers through the Golf Australia Association. If you want to look into it there is a link on the SLP website but it is your own responsibility to arrange it if you think it worthwhile.

One player who had no trouble getting the ball flying to where he wanted it to be, was last years champion Alistair Bayer. Despite a 5x month lay off he returned to the game still in the groove. Alistair showed the brilliance from tee to green that got him to Number #1 ranking in 2008. He hit more than 65% of the greens in regulation and he also won the longest drive and hit the ball superbly all day. Unfortunately for Al however, his touch around the greens was still in holidays, despite having 11x birdie putts he failed to roll one in, infact he only made 3x pars for the day, uncharacteristically Alistair had over 45 putts for the day including a 4x putt from 16 feet on the 8th hole.

A complete contrast to Alistair's day was Runar's expedition (I say expedition because it was an epic journey of highs and lows). Runar couldn't get the ball near the green with his clubs but once he actually finally got there he was rolling putts in from anywhere and everywhere. Runar couldn't miss his with the putter, incredibly he only had about 24 putts for the day, but his best efforts were a 40'+ footer on the 5th hole and a 35' footer on the last. It's a good thing he putted well, with a score of 134, had he putted as bad as Al did for example, he might well have gone into the Guinness Book of World Records for the most strokes in a round of golf as well as his bunker sand displacement achievement. If you need to put it in perspective on just how long a 40foot putt is and why it's such a great effort, it should be noted that 4x of Runar's drives including his longest drive attempt on the 15th hole were less than 28feet long.

Perhaps Rick McEvoy should have visualized that all his putts were 40' footers, because it didn't matter how far his ball was from the hole he always managed to leave his putts short. Rick was in his consistent form from tee to green but unlike Runar he was never able to roll a putt into the hole. It is little wonder that he is always asking his playing partners for a gimmee (which it should be mentioned there is no such thing). Hopefully Rick improves his putting stroke I would hate for him to have to go through the rest of his life always being short.

There must be something in the name "Rick" because big Rick had the putting woes as well. According to Greg Parsons on the 6th Hole Big Rick after a cracking drive and sensational silky chip, set him self in perfect position to make an easy birdie three. Despite the quick greens you could confidently put money on anyone making a flat, straight 2meter put for bird. Anyone that is except for Rick Tunicovic, who missed his easy birdie attempt, lipped out for par, knocked it past the hole failing to make his bogie, then just left it short for his double bogie attempt, but he did eventually tap in for a triple bogie. That's right 5 putts from 2 meters, although technically that is not correct since his third putt actually rolled past the hole by 3meters so ended up further away than when he had started. Whoops!!!!

Understandably Rick was a little disappointed with himself, but his frustration was nothing compared to the Supercoaches temper tantrum on the next hole. Since the mysterious disappearance of Darren Higgs the title of "Angry man" has been indisputably Fils. Fil was unanimously voted the angriest golfer on the golf course in 2008, and unless something extraordinary happens or Damir Dokic joins the social club in the next couple of months the crown is staying firmly glued to his ugly mug in 2009. At one stage Fils golf club was launched 55 meter's skyward just missing the group at the next tee after duffing an approach to the 7th green after a booming drive. Due to the Internet censorship regulations we are unable to repeat the barrage of expletives that were directed at his golf ball but to put in context even Rodney Rude would have said that was a bit crass and uncalled for. The funny thing about the entire ordeal was that the golf club was thrown 55meters, the divot he took during the shot went 60 meters and the spittle coming off his vulgar tongue went 80 meters whereas the ball despite all of the expended energy only traveled 3meters.

Not only does he get angry but he cheats as well. Fil makes his own rules up around the golf course to suit his own circumstances and he doesn't give himself the relevant penalties for lost balls etc. Big Rick could hardly believe it when the Super coach shanked his ball off the 10th tee into the driving range. His shot was so far off target you would swear that Stu Coops must have hit it for him. Fil then spent more than 20 minutes sorting through each and every one of the hundreds of golf balls strewn across the driving range trying to find his ball to avoid having to take a penalty. Just as all of the others had given up looking for Fils ball and declared the ball lost and were moving back to the fairway, miraculously the Supercoach suddenly yelled out "I found it I'll play my next shot can you watch it for me." As he hit the ball back into play, Big Rick looked at playing partner, Greg a little confused. "I'm sure when he teed off he was playing a white precept golf ball with a Sunday Leave Pass logo on it, but now he's playing a yellow topflight golf ball with a Ford emblem on it. I don't think he actually found the right ball?" Greg put Rick's mind to rest when he explained, how Fil is last years leather wedge award title holder and he is odds on to win it again this year too. Rick agreed and has already made his nomination for the end of year ballot and joined the long line of players who have asked to avoid being paired up with the Angry man.

With such anti-social behaviour it can be very difficult to concentrate on your own golf and that's probably why Greg responded when he found out he had drawn the short straw and was in the Super-coaches group.

PS If I pay an extra $20 can you change the groups for me

It was great to have a good feed after the golf, especially after the 6500meter walk, and more shots than you would prefer to admit to. A round of golf always makes you hungry, especially Runar it seems, he alone ate more than 7x sausages during the BBQ after the game. It turns out the reason he was so starved and hungry was because half way around the golf course some of the snacks that he had taken with him to keep the energy levels up were stolen when a crow swooped down and flew off with his snickers bar that he had left on his golf buggy. He chased after the big black crow throwing rocks at it to try and dislodge his precious chocolate, but as we all know the chances of Runar knocking down a birdie are pretty slim. The odds of Runar hitting a birdie are about the same as Stu Coops hitting a drive on the correct fairway.

Centenary Park always test the handicap and the true ability of a golfer, very few people can play a Par Round at the course and the proof is in the fact that a Nett 80 still qualified you for a top 10 finish. The only player to master the course was Jamie Brunton who coincidentally was the player who suggested we add it on to the season's fixture in the first place. Congratulations to Jamie his 96 off the stick Nett 70 gave him a very deserved victory.

Despite his reluctance to play, once he conquered the first hole Greg Parsons never looked back. Winning 9x championship points with his Nett 74 has elevated him to outright leader on the 2009 Championship Points Leader Board. We will all be in trouble if he ever takes his lesson that he won last year, since he has improved so much this year with out any coaching.

Phil Plane was a last minute entrant, he actually cancelled his son's football commitments in order to get a round of golf in, fortunately it was worth all of the family disharmony since he posted a very fine round of golf and finished in third position for the day and took a large leap towards chasing down Dale and Tony on the season rankings.

Cam Wilson is a sleeper, he played only his second round with the club and has shown that he has the trimmings of a super golfer. He won the nearest to pin on the second hole with a sensational birdie and showed that he will be a prolific scorer when he qualifies for a handicap and gets a few more rounds of golf under his belt. Cam played off a Callaway handicap of 27 but on form you would expect him to match Daniel De Marinis, Fitzy or Rick McEvoy any day of the week.

Adam Cooper has managed to drag his golf clubs away from the wedding Dowry and played some adventurous golf, once again he positioned himself comfortably in the middle of the top. Considering he shot a 12 on the first hole to finish the last 17 holes in 91 was a very commendable effort.

Final Results at Centenary Park were as follows:

Longest Drive	Alistair Bayer

Reminder

The ball must be clearly on the CUT surface of the green or fairway to win NTP or longest drive. If it is not on the fairway it doesn't count.

Each player won 1 ball each.

Golf balls are still owed to the following people:

Jamie Brunton	3x golf balls for Winner at Centenary Park
Steve Powne	3x golf balls for Winner at Ivanhoe
Luke Dumbrell	1x golf Ball for NTP on 4 th Hole at Ivanhoe
Darren Higgs	1x golf balls for NTP on 10 th Glen Waverley

As the season progresses it looks as though the competition at the top may remain very close. With Warren absent for a few months it has opened up the door for a few people to cement their position at the top of the pack.

Handicaps

It’s amazing what playing on a real golf course does to the scores. The challenge of playing centenary left all bar 3 guys struggling to keep their heads above water. Only Phil Pane and Greg Parson played to their handicaps and Jamie Brunton playing on what could be called his home course mastered the lay out shooting 2 shots below his handicap and was served a 0.7 deduction for his effort. All of those who finished the get a point 0.1-stroke donation for next month.

The footy tipping competition is up and running. It seems that the leader board is very closely packed with Brunto, Big Nick, Stu coops and Supercoach all within a point of the lead.

The footy Dream team competition on the other hand is all but finished. Going on form it is going to be between Brunto and Fil the rest of us are there it appears just to make up the numbers.
