Cobram / Barooga Golf Trip Results

For the guys who didn't make it to Cobram / Barooga this year you missed a great weekend, and for the guys that did go, I hope you enjoyed the cultural experience it provide you with. I was trying to think of the significant events worth mentioning from the weekend however I wasn't concentrating very hard on things to talk about so forgive me if I don't mention much about it. Hopefully you are more interested in the scores than the activities of the weekend anyway.

Firstly we would like to say thanks to everyone for making the season very successful and we hope that the golf trip capped the year off for you in a good way. Congratulations to all of the trophy winners and also the raffle prize winners too, I trust that a little token at the end of the year makes your participation throughout the season even more worthwhile.

Tony Maclsac winner of the major prize in the raffle

The super coach managed to win both the “Leather Wedge Award” and the “Angry Man Awards” again in 2009, and given his performance by cracking the Shits and breaking the trophy, he must be a sure thing to receive another 21x votes automatically next year from those who witnessed his outburst at this year's presentation.

Dressed in the finest of Pink dresses was none other than our own Stuart Cooper who was voted the “least attractive person in the “fashions on the field” in front of the 300x plus crowd of people dining at the sporties bar on Saturday night .” Stu posted the worst round for the Saturday; he shot a Nett 90 (23 shots worse than the winner) and therefore was crowned “Beer wench” for the night. Unlike the supercoach, Stu took the title, in his stride. He accepted the penalty and delivered drinks to the boys whenever they needed one without any complaints. To his credit Stu did it always with a smile, in fact the worry was that he appeared to be enjoying modeling the little pink frock a bit too much. Long after the compulsory 1x hour service session had elapsed, Stu was still waltzing around the crowded Sportsmans bar in the dress. It took Steve Powne 10x minutes and 4x of his henchmen to wrestle Stu to the ground long enough to get the dress off him, otherwise he probably would have still been wearing it at breakfast on Sunday morning.

Burnsie handing over Beer wench dress to Stu Coops.

All of the extra exercise back and forward to the bar and the lack of time to have a drink himself must have been good for Stu. For the first time in five years he didn't look like he was a walking corpse. It was actually Jarrett who assumed the status of “Physical wreck” on the golf trip. Jarrett was lucky to make it too breakfast on Sunday morning, his eyes were hanging out of his head, his skin had turned pasty white and he was swaying like a palm tee in a hurricane. As he sat at the breakfast table Jarrett had the same glazed over look as a two year old baby fighting to stay awake at dinner time, he even had the head nods and it one stage his head fell forward into his breakfast bowl and he ended up with his rice bubbles stuck to his forehead. It was little wonder that he and Chris finished in 2nd last place in the Ambrose competition despite claiming 3x of the 4x nearest to pin prizes.

It is suspected that Jarrett was so shattered because he stayed up all night, refusing to go to sleep in case someone stole his winnings from the card table. Apparently he plays cards a lot better than he plays golf after a few beers, and no matter what he did with the cards he seemed to always win. At one stage he had blackjack but decided not to claim it because he didn't want to deal, he bought extra cards getting a 4 of diamonds, then a 5 of spades, he then flipped an Ace of clubs to win the hand with 5x under when all he was actually trying to do, was bust the hand and go to bed.

Gerard Maclsac had the same euphoric feeling out on the golf course on Sunday, he emersed himself in a state of Flow, and could do nothing wrong. Having partnered up with Greg Breasley again, he was determined to win back to back “Beer & Barrocca shield trophy” titles. The pair came very close too, the only just fell short losing by only one shot to Big Mick and Phil, despite shooting a brilliant 35 on the back nine. Witnesses claim that Gerard dropped something like 5 or 6 putts from outside 20x feet on the back nine and could have scored better than 1x under par had he not been hamstrung by the fact that he had to take 5x drives from Big Ball Breasley who contributed very little on the front nine. Even still the team managed to win 10x skins for the day, giving them a good start to the 2010 season raffle prize draw.

The “Beer & Barrocca shield trophy” was won by Mick Harper and Phil Plane. The pair finished with Nett 68 despite being under immense pressure as they struggled to find 6x drives for Phil to contribute for the day. As the holes began to run out and the drives weren't coming, the boys were left to play shots from dead behind the bushes, from out of bunkers and on several other occasions from balls that had had only just made it beyond the ladies markers. Incredibly, they, (or should I say Mick) was still able to belt the ball up near the green and still manage to scrounge up a par when any other pairing would have settled for double bogey at best.

The “cuddly rooster award” (softcock) goes to Burnsie, Lukey and Daniel who all pulled out of the Sunday competition because of the possibility of a bit of rain. The boys opted to stay in bed rather than “play a round”, although it is quite possible that perhaps they could have “played around” together while no one else was watching.

While these guys were taking the soft option, Rick showed the level of commitment beyond comprehension. Rick travelled all of the way to Geelong, negotiating driving rain and thunder storms, to watch his son fight for the Australian amateur boxing championship title on Saturday night. As a proud father he cheered his son on for the 3x rounds of 3 minutes the fight lasted. After watching a controversial points decision go against his boy, less than 25 minutes after arriving at the venue, Rick was straight back in the car and heading back to Cobram. With more than 700km and 8x hours in the car for a 9x minute bout, I am putting my vote in for Rick as father of the year 2010. It was a great effort to make it back up to Cobram to have a beer and a round of golf with the boys. He said he wasn't too worried about the dodgy ref's decision at the boxing however he did snap the head off his new driver at one stage without even flinching so perhaps there was a little tension in his arms after all.

Brendan Seagrave drove up to Cobram on Friday, parked his car at the motel carpark and then never got back in the drivers seat even when it was time to go home on Sunday. Brendan was the life of the weekend, he partied hard, swore incessantly and personally pulled the dying township of Cobram / Barooga out of the recession caused by the Global Economic Crisis. Brendan single handedly doubled the bar takings for Friday and Saturday night and also put the average expenditure of small country back into the pokie machines, not to mention paying for Jarrett's golf trip 5x times over by leaving a swag of cash on the card table.

Brendan's greatest moment was at around 3-00am on Sunday morning when he was animatedly showing everyone his new $2000 pair of unbreakable prescription glasses. If he wasn't blind from the bourbons he had been drinking through the night, his actions resulted in leaving him sightless for the rest of the weekend. In the midst of showing everyone how his glasses were totally indestructible, he twisted them this way, he twisted them that way, he sat on them, he folded them in two and then they were no longer unbreakable the were broken. “Oh F##K that's not good” was all he could say. To make matters worse because he couldn't see anymore, unfortunately he was unable to find the tarpaulin for the back of his ute and the 60mm of rain that fell over night collected in his golf shoes and golf bag giving him a very uncomfortable walk around the golf course on Sunday morning.

Poor Brendan needed his playing partner to line him up to hit the golf ball, and to tell him where it went after he hit it. At one point he was seen having an enthusiastic conversation with what he though was Neil Phillips, but actually turned out to be a kangaroo. It was little wonder that he was unable to drive his car home. The worst thing about not being able to drive was that his traveling partner did not have a drivers license so he couldn’t help him out either, so they were in a spot of bother. After hearing Brendan & Mick contemplating the concept of Brendan driving blind and working the peddles while Mick did the steering and watched the road, Phil Plane thought he do the right thing and volunteered to drive them home. It was comforting to know they were going to get home safely, but it would have been interesting to watch them try the other method nonetheless.

Neil Phillips had no trouble getting home from the Sporties bar on Saturday night, in the process he tried to hijack the courtesy bus on the way home. Neil attempted to force the driver to go into the town centre so that he could pick up some Chinese to take back to the hotel. Nobody is quite sure whether he was talking about a late night feast of Take Away Peking Duck and Fried Rice or whether he was looking for some other Asian delicacy. Whatever his purpose was, the bus driver managed to subdue him, before he could take control and detour the bus, beaten and dejected Neil passed out in the back seat and never got his appetite satiated either way.

The bus drivers appear to be well accustomed to the idiocy that that comes with a group of blokes on a golf trip. Here’s how Chris Sfiligoj recounts the tales of woe from the bus trip to the club on Saturday night.

The bus trip from El Sierra was a pisser – 4 blokes, Jarrett, Gerard, Greg and Tony were eager to get to the bar and decided to walk to the Club because they couldn’t be bothered waiting any longer for the bus because it was running late.

While the smart ones waited for the bus, the impatient boy’s soon discovered the walk was actually a lot further than they thought it was going to be. The walk ended up taking quite a long time and they were hot and sweaty, tired and still only half way there.

Finally when the bus got to the motel, and picked up the remaining blokes who had enjoyed a few extra beers and were already half tanked and raring to go for a good feed. We then had the great satisfaction of watching the events, when half way along the trip, we came across the 4x guys who we could see were panting and spluttering and struggling to put one foot in front of the other. Greg was flushed and breathless and Gerard was limping like, an unsuccessful Afghani land mine scout, so they were very happy to see the bus coming by. When Jarrett & Tony flagged him down, the bus driver went to pull over to pick them up, as might be expected the great mates on the bus encouraged the driver to leave them for dead.

Just as the bus slowed to offer them a ride the driver was hurled with so much verbal abuse and threats of mutiny from left, right and centre that he decided it was better not to stop and he sped off down the road leaving Gerard, Greg, Tony and Jarrett in a puff of dust. As the back wheels spun, they sprayed gravel into their shocked, teary eyes, and with a huge cheer from the SLP passengers that could be heard from the city centre ringing in their ears the bus disappeared up the road. The driver turned from chump to champ in an instant and was offered plenty of handshakes, pats on the back and a hefty tip for leaving them in the lurch.

While the bus travellers enjoyed a pot and a Parma in air-conditioned comfort the stragglers finally fell into the restaurant some 30 minutes later (to a raucous cheer reminiscent of the one when Geelong beat St Kilda in the Grand Final), tired and weary with only minutes before the kitchen closed they were offered a very limited choice of menu and they did not have the energy left to enjoy their dinner.

Comments by Chris Sfiligoj

Stu played to his usual “Army” golf – left right, left right, left, right. He was like a nomad just wandering around in all directions and then suddenly appearing from the bushes at random stages of the round. Nobody actually ever knows which playing group he is with because he seems to spend time with people on one fairway then suddenly crosses over to join another group on the green. He makes a social round of golf very social, for everyone on the course, other than those people he is grouped up with because he rarely spends enough time in close proximity to them to have a conversation, other than to say, “Did you see where my ball went?”

Perhaps he spends so much time in the bushes to hide the fact that he is not feeling very, well. Although he looked amazingly fit and healthy during the weekend, he was sighted fertilizing the Cobram, carpark hedges when everyone else was leaving for home on Sunday afternoon.

As for the golf well some played very well and some played poorly, the final finishing place rankings on Saturday, Sunday and the champion of Champions were as follows:

Winner for the day David Burns Won 3 Golf Balls.

Winner of the “BEER WENCH” award was Stuart Cooper who shot the worst round for the day.

The new category of champion of champions was played off between all of the players who won a monthly competition during the year; the champion of champions is the player who has the best score from all of the monthly winners who attended the golf trip. This competition was played off over 9 mystery holes on the Saturday competition with the player who scored the most stableford points taking out the title and the winner's jacket. Congratulations to David Burns who was the overall winner despite being handicapped one hole.

Burnsie won the honour of being the Champion of Champions and wearing the winner's jacket on Saturday night and he was entitled to free drinks all night from the rest of the players on the trip. Not that I think any of you tight wads actually delved into your wallets to get him one.

They say you get what you visualize in life, and if you set goals and do personal affirmations then you can succeed at all before you. Greg Parsons is living proof. Earlier this year he pinned a picture of Tiger Woods holding a trophy up on his wall. The reflection on the trophy was not Tiger but it was actually Greg. The wording on the picture read “PREDICTIONS 2009” and that was the driving force behind every action he undertook and the focus of every conscious moment.

Every morning the first thing he did when he got out of bed was to sit in his study and write a personal affirmation. “I Greg Parsons will perform superbly and all of my skills will continue to improve until such time as I hold the Championship trophy aloft.” He did this every morning and he would write down these words, not once, but 21 times each day. You might wonder whether all the writer’s cramp and early morning starts worth it?

The answer is a resounding “YES” because:

After 11x long months and at least 20368 strokes at an average of 101.84 shots per person, season 2009 has finally drawn to a close with Greg Parsons comfortably taking out the 1st place ranking with an accumulated total of 61 Championship points, 13 points beyond the reach of his nearest rival. Despite a disastrous last round for the season Greg won the “Seasons Championship trophy” beating a strong finishing Gerard MacIssac on 48 points. Greg won himself a new driver and Gerard won a new hybrid club, both prizes courtesy of our sponsors from the Golf Clearance Outlet.

Greg Parson Holding the 2009 Season Championship trophy aloft

It has been a great season with many players demonstrating a significant improvement in their game. The standard of golf has picked up this year as most guys are improving with the regular rounds of golf under their belts. We have also recruited a collection of high performers who are starting to post some extremely good scores.

Prizes courtesy of our sponsors

Phil Plane has proven once again that it doesn’t matter how many tickets you have in a raffle, it is which ticket you have that counts. Phil was the odds on favourite for the raffle since he held more tickets than anybody else. With 39 tickets and a nearly 7% chance of his name coming out with each draw you would have expected his name to feature regularly in the prize draws and possible subsequent upgrades. It was not the case his name never appeared once and his prize tally, was as empty the stomach of the skeleton on the skins trophy that he takes him for winning the most tickets.

Handicaps

The AGU have implemented a new handicapping system for golf clubs around Australia, so as of the 1st January 2010 we will be using a new handicap format. From what I have heard it may have a an effect on some players handicaps so it will be interesting to see what happens when we start the new year in 2010. As it happens almost everyone had a shocker on Saturday, whether it was the weather conditions (perfect), the golf course (not very difficult and relatively short) or the fact that everyone was slightly hungover. Only 2 players scored a sub par round and Daniel DeMarinis played within the handicap buffer zone. Burnsie lost 2.4 strokes and Lukey 0.1 shots whereas the rest of us might as well have stayed in the bar. At least an extra 0.1 shots next year might be enough to get closer to a top 10 finish so long as the new system doesn’t make too much of a difference.
