Having 4x putts	$2-00
Throwing a club	$2-00

All proceeds go towards BBQ & drinks at end of year trip.

Since 100% of respondents agreed with the $5-00 fine for late payments policy, it is now officially part of the clubs constitution. Mick Harper copped a fine for failing to meet the deadline last month and anyone who fails to pay their fees on time from last month onwards will also be helping to fund the beer and meat for the BBQ at the end of year golf trip.

A bit of administration before we get to the results.

Remember the option is always available for a player to arrange a round of golf outside the club program fixture. As long as they arrange the game themselves and they are accompanied by another Sunday Leave Pass player or players for the game they can still be part of the monthly competition. If arranging alternate times, then we need to be advised in advance who is playing, when they are to be playing and then all of the scores must be forwarded to the club on that day.

Please Note: The alternate round must be played before the Sunday Leave pass scheduled date or on the day at a different time. If played outside the normal competition schedule, then the players are still eligible for the monthly title, annual points distribution and skins but will not be able to enter into the Nearest to pin prizes and longest drive competitions. (We have tried this in the past and it has proved too difficult to coordinate.)

NEXT month Dale & Phil P will be taking up this option and anybody else who wishes to join them on the 20th March you are welcome to do so. To book a spot call Dale or reply using the link provided. **I might play with Dale & Phil on 20th March**

We are also still trying to confirm the numbers for people wishing to order shirts, hats and we need expressions of interest regarding a wet weather vest. (It would have been very handy on the weekend) Everyone should have received a message last week but still there are plenty of people who are yet to send a reply one way or the other. Hats are $15-00, Shirts are $30 and vest should be around the $50 price mark

Warburton Golf Course Results February

Firstly congratulations and thank you to all of the guys who dragged themselves out of their warm cozy bed, and managed to put themselves in the car for the hour and a bit, drive in the pouring rain to get to golf. It is a big effort to turn up on a day like Sunday, especially when you know in advance that you will be getting cold and wet and you are also likely to be defeated and humiliated by a challenging, tight and very hilly golf course. Honestly, had it not been for the fact that we had already pre-paid for the cost of the round upfront and because most of us are too frugal with our cash to walk away from $35, nobody would have actually turn up at all, so you could say that our attendance was more obligatory rather than voluntary.

Despite the first 12 or 13 holes being played in what can only be described as very wet conditions there were still some very good scores posted, owing mainly to the fact that the golf course held up incredibly well, even after more than 24 hours of solid continuous rain. Amazingly, the greens were remarkably quick despite being covered with puddles of water and the normally gentle Warburton creek was a raging torrent, which whisked away any errant ball that managed to get within its reach.

Once again, Dale has proven this year he is going to be a strong contender for the 2011 seasons championship, he posted another sensational round and finished in third position for the day. His handicap has come under a bit of scrutiny, because he continues to post sensational scores, but somehow the handicap does not seem to get reduced by as much as it ought too. This hardly seems fair for the rest of us, especially when he is practicing daily and he takes every advantage around the course that he can. Dale, Phil Rick and Matt (or was it Ricky Ponting) were all fined on Sunday after they were caught hitting off from the ladies markers, Dale claims it was an accident, however many around the BBQ are alleging it was a deliberate attempt to gain an unfair advantage. It will be interesting to see if later in the year any of their names are put forward as candidates for leather wedge nominations.

Perhaps hitting off the ladies tee's was for Rick Turcinovic's benefit, because on one of the few holes the group played from the correct markers, Rick took 3x shots to get passed the squatters tees and even then only by a matter of inches. Rick copped his fines with a smile on his face, but he was also relieved to hear that he wasn't the only person to have a bad shot or two. In fact the fine jar was overflowing with cash with a total of $49 worth of penalties being issued for the day.

Stu Coops contributed with his usual fines for hitting the ball across 2 fairways and he was asked for a gold coin donation after he executed the blatant shank in front of a very boisterous crowd, during a short chip to the 14th green. Peter Hutson played an even better shank when he managed to accidentally clip the ball during a practice swing. The web footed, feathered creatures around the 18th green had to demonstrate why they were given their name when they had to duck for cover as Pete's attempted practice swing went astray. His shank nearly decapitated the entire badelynge of ducks who were relishing in the damp conditions. It is believed one of the ducks was heard saying to one of his mates "I thought you said to day was meant to be perfect weather for us, being out here with these clowns is almost suicidal.

Quite a few blokes found great satisfaction in watching the Super-coach dip into his pocket to pay a fine after he put his ball out of bounds on the longest drive hole. Fil was playing a very good round and was only too happy to tell anyone within earshot about it. After a nine on the first hole he then put together a solid round including several strings of successive pars and a birdie on the 10th hole, but his day unraveled when he was beaten on the NTP prize on the 12th hole by the last player of the day. After 3x putting from 1.5 meters and missing a simple par, the Super-coaches exact words were “I don’t care if you made a Par and I didn’t, because at least I will win a ball for being nearest to the pin.” He was reminded not to count his chickens before they hatched, since there was still another group to play the hole. He cheered arrogantly every time one of the players in the final group missed the green, so when Tony Grasso’s ball plugged stone dead a foot inside Fil’s NTP marker the look on his face was absolutely priceless.

When it came to the longest drive competition, 2x holes later the Super-coach decided he would save face by trying to win the prize ball for the longest drive. In an attempt to gain the extra yards to hit the ball further, he drew on all of his knowledge and coaching expertise to change his otherwise working perfectly swing. Unfortunately the Super-coaches new, Super-power, Super-swing was missing one technical element, “accuracy” and the ball shot off at right angles into the paddocks next door. Seizing the moment Stu Coops looked at his playing partners as if to say watch this, then he turned to Fil and asked “was that a shank?” looking for any excuse and something to blame for his misfortune and before he actually realized what he was saying Fil answered “yes”, this answer was received with a cheer and a dance, it was high fives all round as he was reminded that a shank would cost him a $2 fine. For the duration of the remaining 4 holes the 2008 & 2009 Leather wedge winner, spent every spare minute trying to explain why his shot was not a shank and tried to weasel his way of the obligation to pay the fine.

The longest drive hole was the demise of many players. Greg Breasley nearly dislocated his shoulder as he wound up full throttle during his attempt to reclaim the big hitter’s title. Unfortunately when he finished his follow through Greg’s ball remained unmoved, it was still on the tee, but his playing partners were rolling around on the damp grass laughing in hysterics. Greg just snarled and said “if I had of hit that one, it was gonna be big.” The ever consistent Ron Parsons had a lapse of concentration or rush of blood and he topped his longest drive attempt, the ball dug into the mud in front of him and then travelled probably a whole 2 meters further than Greg Breasleys ball did. For his next shot Ron was left in the predicament of standing in an elevated garden bed while trying to hit the ball which was lying 40cm below his feet. Understandably that didn’t work out well for him either and he finished the hole with big number.

There were a few interesting lies during the day, Mick Harper over cooked his second shot into the 11th green and amazingly his ball landed in the hollow of a tree stump from one of the giant pine trees that line the picturesque Warburton layout. With the ball sitting in a two meter wide tree stump more than a meter off the ground Mick decided that he had no other option other than to take an unplayable lie and give himself a penalty drop.

Al Bayer on the other hand, after hooking his ball into to the fork of one of the giant trees, when faced with a similar situation proved his mastery of the touch shot and showed a brazen display of courage. How he actually even found the ball in the first place is miracle in itself, but the amazing part was when Alister climbed nearly 6’ feet off the ground with golf his golf club in hand, took a normal stance while perched on the branches and pitched the ball out of the tree, back down towards the green. I know it sounds like an urban myth and appears too far fetched to be true but alas his playing partners attest to the validity of the shot. All 3x of Alisters audience say they would be willing to swear under oath, as a credible witness and testify that Al’s shot from up in the tree finished within 2 meters of the flag giving him a most unlikely par.

Steve Powne played a miracle shot of his own, Geoff Cooper recounts the path of a ball which ultimately finished less than a foot from the hole. "Steve demonstrated that there are many different ways to hit the pitching wedge to the green. While spectators expected the 80 meter pitching wedge to fly high and straight, the ball did the exact opposite. The Srixon 00 with an "S" on it killed more than 150 worms as it grubbed along the ground. Water and small invertebrate pieces were flying everywhere from the rooster tail behind the ball as it skidded along the wet grass, it then skimmed across a puddle sending two mating Eastern Banjo Frogs jumping for cover, before being flicked up on to the green and finishing almost resting on the flag pole."

Although this shot was not quite text book perfect the outcome was spectacularly good whereas when Steve hit a successful approach to the 6th green the outcome was disastrous. Apparently Steve was blindsided while playing the sixth hole and made the fatal mistake of asking Fitzzy where the green was. Fitzzy saw it is an opportunity to provide the wrong information. Rather than direct his long time friend towards the correct green 180 meters around the dog leg corner, Mark thought it would be funnier if Steve aimed at the fourth green especially since it was a 110 meters closer. Steve's pitching wedge swept smoothly under the ball, cut through the damp grass and hit the ball crisply. The ball soared up into the sky with just a slight touch of draw from right to left, right on target for the middle of the green. The ball landed softly in the heart of the green with just enough back spin to pull the ball up and set up an easy up hill birdie putt (that is if it had of been the right green). It wasn't until Steve got out his putter that Fitzzy decided the joke was over and it was time to tell him he still had another 100 plus meters to go before he could use the putter because he was on the wrong putting surface.

John Mea managed to score a 7 on the Par 3, 12th after missing a putt for par. He somehow managed to accumulate five putts on the green. According to an eyewitness account he totally misread his par attempt and then over hit the next shot by at least 1.5 meters passed the hole. He was quickly reminded that if he missed the next putt he would be facing a 4x putt $2-00 fine. Suddenly the normally confident and accurate putter got terribly nervous. As he stood over the ball perspiration dripped from his forehead (it may have been rain), his fingers twitched and his knees were shaking like a New Zealand Church Minister's legs during a lunch time sermon. Unfortunately the pressure was all too much for John and he pushed the ball out to the right and missed the putt. He then dinged the ball on the head and it rolled over once but not enough to go in the hole. Finally his fifth stroke landed at the bottom of the cup and the fine jar was $4-00 better off for John's troubles.

Geoff Cooper probably had the most character building day of any of us, he arrived at the course late after experiencing a few car troubles on the way to the course. He started the day with an 11, he finished the day with an 11 and the 16 holes in between were not that much better. If that wasn't enough, his shoes were leaking, his umbrella blew inside out and he discovered that he had accidentally left his wet weather gear behind on the car roof. His bookend (11)'s at the start and finish of the day were enough to secure him the beer wench position with a Nett 85 and his new driver was later seen posted on eBay with the caption "Free to good home." The day got even worse for Geoff when the "Evergreen Winery Tours" luxury statesman broke down on the way home, leaving Geoff stranded on the side of the road, while he waited for the tow truck to pick up the car and his wife to pick him up. Obviously it was a day that he would have been better off just staying in bed. Given all of his car troubles at present, if you were planning on getting a hole in one, perhaps it might be worth holding off for a few months just until you know he has got the car fixed or you might end up spending your free winery tour prize pushing the car instead of drinking the booze.

Congratulations to Steve O'Sullivan who has claimed his second monthly title from just four outings with the social club. Aided by a very generous handicap he scored a Nett 61 to handicap claim first prize and 15 championship points. Even with his 5 putt John Mae was able to score a Nett 64 and edge out the in form Dale Robinson who once again shot in the low 90's for a sub par performance. Peter Hudson played his third round with the club and obtained his official club, finishing in 4th spot in the process. Under the new handicapping system it seems Greg Breasley and Phil Plane appear to be becoming regular names in the top 10. Mick Harper scored the rounds lowest gross score of 81 a whopping 39 shots less than Geoff Coopers effort.

Don't forget that it is very important to count all of your shots, rounding down your score is not an acceptable practice. One or two strokes doesn't sound like much, over 18 holes, but it can often be the difference between 2nd and 8th position on the points tally. Penalty strokes, air-swings or missed gimmee putts all need to be counted or else you might find your name being engraved on the leather-wedge trophy at the end of the year.

“SKINS” were distributed to those players good enough to win a hole outright. If more than 1 player got the lowest score on a hole it is Jackpotted until an outright winner occurs.

Handicaps

The new handicapping system doesn’t appear to be as ruthless as the old system was; Dale’s handicap is not coming down half as quick as we would like to see it go down. The advantage to the system appears that a player’s handicap can go up in bigger increments after a disastrous performance and the guys who were given higher starting handicaps are featuring more regularly at the top end of the leader board.

A few people are still asking how the system works so this is a simple example of how the handicaps are formulated and adjusted.

In the example below the 10th best score which is the 20th (24) would be dropped off for the next round and would be replaced by either a round which was better than the one that dropped off or else one of the “25 over Par” scores would become active and the players handicap would be adjusted slightly upwards. If the player’s next round was a 21 over par then an adjustment on the player’s handicap would be made in a downward direction. Where a player’s latest score is outside their best 10 and the score that drops of as the 20th round is also not included in the formulation of their existing handicap, then the players handicap will remain unchanged.

In summary the slope handicap is calculated by taking the most recent 20x rounds of golf and averaging the best 10 scores x0.96 to create the handicap. For example.
